

Week commencing 04.05.20

Hi everyone,

I'm really missing you all and I hope you are all keeping busy, safe and well. Thank you to those of you that have sent me your work so far. I have loved reading it and seeing your mythical creatures.

This week we are going to focus on heroes. I would like you to read online about Greek heroes such as Heracles, Perseus and Theseus. Then I would like you to create a hero of your own and write a character description about them. You could also draw a picture as you like. Think about what your character looks like, are they human or part god? Are they male or female? Do they have special powers? What are they like? I have included an example on the next page.

Remember to use a range of punctuation, paragraphs, descriptive language and clauses. I look forward to seeing your work. Please send it to me through Showbie or by email at brunel@ksmacademy.com.

For topic/art, I'd like you to design your own Greek shield. I have added some ideas to the end of this document. Greek shields usually showed something about the owner or depicted an image of the gods or monsters. Feel free to google images for more inspiration.

I hope you enjoy your work this week. Remember, there is also new learning available on MyMaths and Activlearn, along with the activities on Education City and Century.

Stay safe and well.

Mr Collier.

Kruger was a tall, terrifying man, with long, matted, yellow hair and shining, piercing, blue eyes. He had a rough, tangled beard and huge, strong arms which were covered in swirling, blue tattoos that were the source of his special powers.

To protect him from monsters and enemies, he wore tough, brown leather armour around his body. He had long, thick, brown gloves on his arms to protect him in battle and his dirty, green trousers bore the marks of his many travels. Around his waist, Kruger wore thick, ancient belts, crafted from the skin of monsters he had slain, which he used to carry things that he had raided.

In his hands he held two huge, sharp axes that shone in the sun. He used these powerful, heavy weapons in battle to defeat his enemies. When Kruger was in the midst of battle, he would cry out to his gods, his tattoos would begin to glow and he would be blessed with increased strength. His magical axe head would also burst into flames to further hurt his enemies.

Kruger was a good man, whose main goal in life was to protect others from the many bandits and monsters that roamed Greek mythology. As the son of a god and a mortal woman, he had not had an easy life. But the many troubles he had faced moulded him into the brave, selfless man that he was.
